Cohen Junior Leads Young Irish Actors

"Young" Joel Cohen, who blossoms out as an Irish comedian.

"To the Youngest Irish Comedian in the World"—Joel Cohen—Aged 9 Months—February 1916—from Allen Doone.

The foregoing inscription, engraved on a handsome little silver loving cup would lead the reader to believe—but for the age specified—that the genial president of the Consolidated Amusement Company and erstwhile seeker after honors political had turned thesaurian and was reversing all traditions of race and creed. But such is not the case.

Nevertheless, a member of the family of the president of the Consolidated Amusement Company was the recipient a few days ago of the beautiful cup in question, carrying the above mentioned inscription. And—let it be whispered, for the many friends of Joe Cohen, Sr., would never believe him to be that age—it was no other than the grandson of "old" Joe who appeared with Allan Doone in the charming little sketch "A Romance in Ireland," presented by Allen Doone and Miss Edna Keeley at the Bijou theater last week.

"Well Done," Says Doone. Naturally young Cohen was not entrusted with a difficult role but, according to Allen Doone—and he claims to be some pumpkins as an Irish comedian and should know—the youngster handled his role splendidly and gives every evidence of some day going well to the forefront in the profession chosen for him at a very youthful age. According to the fond parents of the young man he showed an aptitude for acting at a very tender age—about nine months ago—and has consistently and persistently followed this bent to the present time. His advent into the Irish role is his latest theatrical effort and is a decidedly new and novel line, evidencing a versatility that is most remarkable in one so young. While no definite prediction is made at the present time, who can deny that in years to come Joel Cohen, Jr., shall take his place in the halls of Thespis—wherever they are—alongside of that other great Irish comedian, George M. Cohan? Notice the similarity in the last name?

It might be well to state in passing that Joel Cohen, Sr., he of fame as an impresario and politician, is equally as pleased as his grandson over the stage triumphs of the latter and stated, at the time of presentation of the loving cup, that he would "rather have had this happen than be elected mayor of Honolulu."

SORE AND WEAK EYES

Have you ever given it a thought how much harm is done to your eyes by the strong sunlight and also the artificial light to which your eyes are constantly exposed? If so, you will readily understand that only by prompt action you can avoid trouble to one of your most necessary senses, the eyesight.

For many years, scientists have experimented with tinted lenses, which may prove beneficial to all the different prevailing conditions and diseases of the eyes, and at last they have now placed on the optical market lenses which are not any more an experiment but a proven success.

The different lenses are too numerous to mention here, but H. K. Hops, the Eyesight Specialist and Manufacturing Optician of corner Fort and Beretania Sts., has made a deep study of the action of the various tinted lenses and can now on account of his knowledge gained through years of experience advise which color will prove most beneficial in each individual case.—Adv't.

"CYCLONE" DAVIS TOLD TO CUT OUT "AMEN"

WASHINGTON, D. C.—"Amen" will be heard no longer from "Cyclone" Davis, representative from Texas. Congressman Baker, in the chair, decided that Congressman Davis had interrupted enough speeches with an "amen," which he shouted with camp meeting fervor, and ruled that the representative from Texas might think "amen" hereafter, but must refrain from expressing it, unless he formally obtained the floor.
